

This unlicensed spectrum would create new high-tech jobs for people like me. A parallel example is the highly successful 802.11a, responsible for a whole new category of wireless networking products.

Most of the TV spectrum is already unused today. In my area, home to millions of people, only a handful of broadcast channels are used.